11. Indica - the most common and oldest of the three types of rice, it is grown in the tropics and subtropics, and is the staple food of the people of South and Southeast Asia. It is characterized by a long, slender grain and a high amylose content, which gives it a firm, chewy texture when cooked. It is also known for its ability to tolerate high temperatures and its resistance to pests and diseases.

The first of these is the fact that the "official" statistics on crime rates are often inflated. This is due to a variety of factors, including the fact that many crimes go unreported, and that the police often have a vested interest in reporting high crime rates. This is because high crime rates can lead to increased funding for the police, and can also lead to increased public support for the police.
